THE MENDICANTS.

We are as mendicants who wait
Along the roadside in the sun.
Tatters of yesterday and shreds
Of tomorrow cloth us every one.

And some are doctors, who believe
And glory in the days of old,
While some are dreamers, harping still
Upon an unknown age of gold.

Hopeless or witless! Not one heeds
As lavish time comes down the way
And passes in the suppliant's hat.
One great new blunder told today.

But there be others, happier far,
The vagabond's sons of God,
Who know the players and the plovers,
And care not how the world may flood.

They idle in the traffic lands,
And loiter through the woods with spring.
To them the glory of the earth
Is but to lose a blackbird's song.

They, too, go to each one his day,
But their wise hearts know many things
Beyond the sating of desire,
Above the dignity of kings.

One, I remember, kept his coin,
And laughing tipped it in the air,
But when two strolling pipe players
Came by he tossed it to the pair.

Spent his joy, his childish heart,
Dashed to their wild, outlandish bars.
Then surprised he hid him down
That night and slept beneath the stars.

—Elliott Currier in London Sun.

Easter's Hats and Bonnets.

An article of special interest and value to women in The Ladies' Home Journal is a description of "This Easter's New Hats and Bonnets," by Isabel A. Mallon and illustrated from the most recent Paris models. In a general description of the newest headgear Mrs. Mallon writes: "The fashionable materials for this Easter's hats and bonnets are chip, manilla, leghorn, Neapolitan, Madagascare and English straw, and all the straw braids, especially those imitating satin. Black velvet is largely used for trimming with moire and satin ribbons, deftly looped. Ostrich tips and long feathers are in vogue, though flowers the given preference over everything. The big Parma violets, as well as the enormous roses and poppies that were so generally used last season, continue to obtain, while camellias, tuberoses, white lilies, lilies of the valley, blue hortensias and nigger robins are counted as quite new."

Ancient and Modern Clothing.

Ancient wearing apparel was not out to fit, as is our modern clothing. Having no definite shape of its own, it did not disguise the wearer's figure, and the grace and beauty of Greek drapery are dependent almost entirely on the perfect proportions of the figure beneath. The tunic worn by both Greeks and Romans was little, if at all, fitted to the wearer, and, when fastened, hung in folds all round, while the toga was little more than a cloak and was worn in all sorts of ways according to the prevailing fashion. The folds of old seem to have worn long, but the rest of their clothing seems to have been simply wrapped round them, for it was difficult for them to turn and even walk without their "wrapping up their legs." The clothing of the northern races was probably always more of a fit than that of the southern, for they used leather, which does not lend itself to simple draping, but our ancestors probably wore an almost shapeless tunic belted at the waist. Another striking difference is found in the gradual monopoly by women of the ornamental element in dress. One masculine dress was by far the most splendid, and woman, holding an absolutely subordinate social position, had to content herself with humbler attire. As she has won her way to freedom and equality she has annexed, not only the beautiful, but the extravagant elements of costume and left man to content himself with a condition of colorless utility.—Chicagopatri Enquirer.

The Big Hat in Church.

This is what happens to the man behind the hat. The preacher disappears until nothing remains but a voice. And with the hat standing against the spot where the voice is, and the modulated sentences breaking against it, how is attention to be fixed upon the sermon? The mind grows lax, the quiet and sweetness of the sanctuary tend to distraction, the hat fills the whole visible universe, and involuntarily one's thoughts center upon it. It is a wonderful construction. There is a yellow rose trembling on a long stem with every movement of the wearer's head, and one begins to calculate the extent of its arc. There are bunches of feathers disposed, apparently, with view to preventing anything from being seen between them whichever way the hat is turned. And there are statuettes of ribbon, upright and immovable, which still further obscure the horizon. Occasionally one gets a momentary glimpse of the hand of the preacher as it is stretched out in gestation, but it seems a mere detached fragment, vaguely beating the air. The preacher himself has disappeared as if he had never been. The only thing visible when the hat is turned for a moment is another hat of the same kind further on.—New York Observer.

The wheat of southern countries contains more albumoids than that grown in temperate or northern zones, and hence is better suited for the manufacture of macaroni.

The banana is the most prolific of all the fruits of the earth, being 44 times more productive than potatoes and 181 times more than wheat.

ERIE MEDICAL CO., 64 N. GARDEN ST., BUFFALO, N. Y.

People shudder at the tales of Monte Carlo suicides, but look on with perfect equanimity while friends and loved ones commit just as certain suicide by neglecting their health. Trifling disorders of the digestion persistently neglected lead to impurity of the blood, the tissues of the body are imperfectly nourished, and emaciation and debility follow. In the case of that dread disease, consumption, imperfectly nourished tissue is built up in the lungs, forming a suitable soil for the germs of that deadly disease. One-seventh of all the deaths each year are due to consumption. This fearful death rate could be easily avoided if the proper remedy was resorted to.

A sure preventive and cure of consumption is found in Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It cures 98 per cent of all cases. It corrects all disorders of digestion, invigorates the liver, and makes the blood pure and plentiful. It is the great blood-maker, flesh-builder, and nerve invigorator. It gets into the blood and acts directly upon the lungs, building up healthy tissue and driving out all impurities and disease germs. Thousands have testified to its wonderful merits. Druggists sell it.

"I feel that I must write you telling you of the great benefit derived from the use of your Golden Medical Discovery," writes Miss Laura Pierce, of East Bethlehem, Washington Co., Pa. "Last summer my friends thought I was surely going into consumption, and having tried doctors before with no satisfactory results and hearing your medicine so highly spoken of, I took one bottle. My cough left me altogether with all the distressing symptoms, and in fact the cure seemed almost miraculous to all who saw me. I cannot say enough in praise of the medicine, and have done much to induce others to use it."

Through the autumn woods the shadows grow
And wider and deeper the streamlets flow.
No sound but the chirping waters heard,
Or the faint low twitter of some lone bird,
Related, forgotten and wondering why
He made his desert him—his mate fly.
For each wind is blowing his trees 'round
And scattering the leaves of golden red
That cling as they fall to ferns pale green.
Cream tinted, like old lace some quon
So away from this scene to a cheerier one
The lone bird flies with the setting sun.
And reads amid the boughs of old oak trees,
Where scattered their brood in the same old tree
Breeze.

There in dreams he forgets his snow bound nest.
Till spring comes again—then home he busts
And with wings outspread he wanders hence
Till he finds the maple tree close by the fence,
Where year after year his mate and he
Have reared their brood in the same old tree
Breeze.

ON THE LAVA BEDS.

In about the year 1842 there was born in one of the most desolate regions of the Union—the lava beds that extend from northern California into southern Oregon—an Indian girl. Her father was Coyote, an infamous Modoc hunter, who lost his life in an attack on a party of white emigrants to the Pacific coast in 1860. Along about 1870, when adventurous white men, seeking gold, began to penetrate the Modoc lava bed region by the several hundreds every year there came that year a certain young Kentuckian, who had been an army sergeant stationed at the Pacific, in San Francisco. He was Frank Riddle. He had refreshments at the Modoc home of the squaw widow, Coyote's, and soon took a fancy to her daughter, Wi-ne-ma, then 16 years old, and famous in that region as the best looking and most agreeable Indian girl in California. Riddle got money in gold mining in southern Oregon and soon married the handsome Modoc girl. The couple took up their abode near the gold diggings, and the young wife began to learn her husband's language. While she visited her savage brother and sisters occasionally and bore their gifts she became wedded to the life and thought of white people. But she never dared, on pain of assassination or poisoning, to reveal her change of faith or to show that she really loved a white man.

In 1860, when gold was discovered in large quantities in the Klamath region and thousands of venturesome Americans rushed through northern California and across the lava beds, the anger of the Modocs was roused to fullest pitch by the lawlessness of the invading whites. In June, 1860, the Modocs lured 14 gold miners into a narrow canyon, and there, after unspeakable cruelties, extending over two days, let the white men die. The news of the murders by the Modocs got abroad a month later and set on fire the whole white population of northern California and southern Oregon.

In August a band of 75 whites left Yreka, Cal., to punish the Modoc savages for the act. The avengers were led by Benjamin Wright, an old mountaineer, who had hunted and fought Indians with Kit Carson, Jim Beckwith, John Ford and Jim Bridger. After a long chase through the rough country, which was not productive of good results, the chiefs were invited to meet the whites and make a treaty. This they agreed to do, and the evening parties went into camp near each other on Lost river, the Indians outnumbering the whites men by three to one. Early on the morning of the conference a young Modoc squaw, brotherless, her clothing torn and her feet bleeding, came into the Wright camp and asked to see the leader. She had run and walked some nine miles across the rugged mountain trail. Her errand was to warn the invaders against treachery. The night before she learned at the council fire that her people intended to surround the white men, quarrel the conference and put them to death. Wright and his men had remained near the place of conference, and when the unsuspecting Modocs fell into the trap and were surrounded from the slaughter that ensued. This affair is known as the Ben Wright massacre. The squaw who conveyed the timely warning to her white friends was Wi-ne-ma, the wife of Frank Riddle. This fact was never found out by her people, else her life would have been forfeited.

Eleven and a half years passed. The Modocs had been confined by the government to a defined reservation, and treaties were made with them, and were repeatedly broken. The tribe was the prey of post traders, contractors and of almost every white man who came in contact with it. The only one of the hated whites in whom the Indians had confidence was the late Judge Elijah Steele. To this man they went for counsel and advice, but in the lapse of time they even contemplated taking his life, as in the Indian mode of reasoning the death of a single white man erases the wrongs perpetrated by many.

Sullen at first under their injuries, the Modocs were awakened to fury and declared vengeance on their oppressors. The memory of any detail of the Wright affair was never allowed to fade. At every council Captain Jack or Scar Face Charley called upon the vengeful Modocs to remember the August day when the palefaces had killed their fathers and brothers. At last, in January, 1873, the whites in northern California knew that another Indian war was at hand.

Shortly after hostilities began the government appointed a peace commissioner to confer with the rebellious redskins and endeavor to make peace. In the meantime Riddle and other squaw men on the reservation used their influence toward a settlement of the difficulty, but to no effect. The turbulent warriors led by Captain Jack were bent on a slaughter. When the peace commissioner arrived on the ground, the Indians refused to treat with him. They did, however, finally agree to surrender to Judge Steele and two other men of that region and arranged to give up their arms the following day. When Steele and his companions went to the agreed place of the surrender, not an Indian was in sight, and they returned to the military camp. Steele then agreed to go alone and interview the war chief. That night Steele went through an experience few men have endured. While talking to him in pacific terms in the Chinook jargon they were discussing in their own tongue the advisability of murdering their visitor. Steele understood sufficiently their language to comprehend his danger, but did not betray his knowledge. The chiefs finally decided to spare his life on condition of his bringing the commissioners and commanding officers of the troops to confer with them.

But for the efforts of the brave squaw, Wi-ne-ma, war would have broken out long before. Many times she took the weapons from the hands of warriors bent on the destruction of settlers in the region, and it was she who warned the officers of the army of the trouble brewing. Her influence with her people began to wane as they raged against the whites increased. Then, too, the warriors began to mistrust her husband. Her food was poisoned by Modocs, and she was compelled to sleep in secret places for fear of death from her own brothers and relatives for her suspected undue liking for white people.

Colonel A. B. Meacham, who was in command of the military post, was a humane man and did all in his power to right the wrongs of his dusky wards. This man Wi-ne-ma revered, and when the second peace commissioner was appointed she did all in her power to prevent him from attending the council with the chiefs. She grasped his horse by the bridle, begging Meacham and Canby not to meet Jack and his band. When she found entreaty was in vain, the devoted woman mounted her pony and rode with the ill fated party to the place of meeting.

The story of that meeting has been told many times. When Meacham was attacked by the bloodthirsty Scorchin, Wi-ne-ma threw herself on the savage and begged him to spare the life of her white friend. Others coming up, Wi-ne-ma ran from warrior to warrior, turning aside their weapons. At last one of many bullets struck Meacham senseless, and the quick witted squaw turned aside the weapon aimed to finish his life, with the words, "Him dead; no use shoot." Scorchin tried to scalp Meacham, when Wi-ne-ma grasped the knife. The enraged buck struck her a terrible blow, almost knocking her senseless. Again the wit of the woman came into play. "The soldiers are coming up!" she cried, and the next moment a detachment of troops did appear. Amid cries from the enraged troopers, a dozen weapons were leveled at the breast of the brave squaw. Looking the mounted men straight in the face, she cried: "No shoot me! I tried to save them!" Then came from the ranks the words of an enlisted man, "The man who harms her I'll kill."

The same day Wi-ne-ma's husband, Riddle, was riding horseback and was shot dead from ambush by a Modoc. The body was dragged many miles over the trail by the frightened horse. When the horse stopped, the head and shoulders of the corpse were so horribly mutilated that the horse was unrecognizable. Then the three little children of Wi-ne-ma and Riddle were murdered as they slept and their bodies burned in the rude family dwelling. Wi-ne-ma, under the cover of darkness and eluding the hostile members of her race and family, made her way across the desolate lava beds to the government post. She was sick and broken hearted at the horrible fate of all her family, but she nevertheless became the constant and devoted nurse of Colonel Meacham as he lay in the hospital recovering from his six gunshot wounds. It was 11 weeks before the colonel was able to leave his bed. By that time Wi-ne-ma was almost a helpless invalid. She was an important witness for the government in the trial of Captain Jack and his subordinate chiefs for the murder of General Canby and other officers, and for this she herself was shot through the chest as she sat one evening by a window at her lonely home. Colonel Meacham gave the little woman chief liberally from his purse, and the soldiers at the post saw that she never lacked medical attendance and nursing.—Philadelphia Times.

THE MONETARY CONFERENCE.

In accordance with the resolution of Congress to provide for an International Monetary Conference, the President has appointed Senator Wolcott, Hon. Charles J. Folger and ex-Vice President Stevenson, commissioners for the promotion of such conference.

Two of the three appointees supported the Republican platform last year, which declared against free coinage and in favor of the gold standard, until European nations should assent to the free coinage of silver by the United States.

Senator Wolcott, the representative in Congress of the silver producing State of Colorado, discovered when the returns came in from the election last November, that his financial views were not in accord with those of the people of his State. He then hastened to Europe, for the purpose it was stated, of getting the great powers to consent to an International Monetary Conference. It is said that his mission was not successful, though the money kings of Europe, in consideration of the services rendered them by the Republican party, promised to help that party out of a hole by sending representatives to the conference if it was decided to hold one. At the short session of Congress, Senator Wolcott's Republican colleagues, resolved to give the President authority to appoint three commissioners to promote the conference and the silver men supported the resolution, though they expressed themselves as having no faith in the movement, as England was making more money by having the United States one of its financial dependencies, than it could possibly make by having the United States open its mints to silver.

Now, in reply to a question by a bimetallic member, Balfour declares in the House of Commons that there is nothing in the situation that would lead him to suppose that anything could be gained by Great Britain in promoting an International Monetary Conference, and doubtless Mr. Balfour understands the situation. He knows that Great Britain is purchasing silver bullion in the United States at 61 cents an ounce, and coining it into shillings and pence worth $1.30 an ounce. He knows that his people are buying wheat, cotton and other products in the United States for one-half what they cost when the mints were open to silver, and the money powers which control Europe will not assent to a proposition that would reduce the purchasing power of their millions, nearly if not quite one-half.

Wolcott's Monetary Conference, should it ever materialize, is not likely, therefore, to result in Europe giving its assent to the free coinage of silver by the United States, and it is only because the United States Government is dominated by the money kings of Europe when it asks their permission to do what itself has the constitutional right to do.

If President McKinley and Senator Wolcott do not believe that free coinage would be beneficial to the country, why ask Europe to restore it? and if they do believe it would benefit the country, why not do it without waiting for the consent of any other nation?

THE GOVERNMENT WILL ACT.

A sensational bill was introduced in the Senate Tuesday providing for the Secretary of the Navy to forthwith take possession of the Bethlehem and Carnegie armor plants and to hold and use such lands, buildings and machinery for a period of time sufficient to enable the Secretary to manufacture the armor plate necessary for the completion of the battleships, Alabama, Illinois and Wisconsin.

It seems that these two great companies have refused to bid on the contract, presumably owing to the fact, that either or both have special facilities for doing the work and are better prepared, but there seems to be a compact to jam the Government into paying a sum to be dictated by these companies, in other words the progress of the work on the three great battleships, has reached that point where the work must go on or a great loss must necessarily follow. With this in view, the companies have concluded that by working in unison they can dictate such terms as will suit their pleasure.

Senator Chandler was aroused over the position taken, and has determined to see whether a corporation of this character is greater than the United States, hence the bill. It is only contemplated to take possession of the Bethlehem works unless some unlooked for necessity arises.

After the battleships are completed a provision in the bill provides for the return of the property to the owners, also for the adjudication of claims against the Government by the Court of Claims. The provisions of the bill are based on the Fifth Amendment to the Constitution, providing for the taking of private property under certain emergencies, for public use of the United States under an obligation to make just compensation therefor.

It is to be hoped that the movement will be carried out in detail, as it may not only convince these two great companies, but corporations generally, throughout the country that the Government is not entirely under their control, and the quicker they are convinced of this the better.

If the law passes and is enforced, it will be at least a good beginning toward breaking the power of the trusts, the majority of which have become so bold as to totally ignore the laws of the land. If the schemes of one combine are defeated, it will have the effect of checking the schemes of others against the people.

A PATHETIC story now comes of a wasted life, from Miss Phoebe Conzine, spent in efforts to give suffrage to women. In her youth a popular belle sought and admired, she had many opportunities to marry well; but brushed them all aside determined to devote her life to the "cause of women." Her verdict on her life work is a sad one, confessing failure and admitting that she worked in the wrong direction.

After reciting the vicissitudes of her long experience and rare opportunities, she says:

The majority of women prefer a quiet, domestic life, while man, by nature, seeks the conflicts of the outer world and thrives and grows therein. Women in public life will never prove satisfactory. She is naturally a housekeeper. I would advise all young women to marry and become housekeepers.

THE FLOODS.

The Missouri's Angry Waters Causing Great Damage.

OMAHA, April 14.—Up till midnight last night the river held stationary, but after that it began to rise and at 9 o'clock this morning the gauge at the Florence pumping station showed a rise of eight inches.

From along the river north and south of Omaha came reports of flooded bottoms and squatters fleeing in the night from the angry waters. No loss of life is reported.

KANSAS CITY, April 14.—A rise of half a foot has taken place in the Missouri for the 24 hours ending at noon to-day, and Weather Observer Connor says the danger line will be reached this evening.

LEAVENWORTH, Kas., April 14.—The river has risen a foot since yesterday afternoon. It is at 48.8, higher than at any time since 1891. When a pontoon of the bridge went out this morning it carried out a portion of the Rock Island track. This road and the Chicago & Great Western were compelled to use the Burlington tracks.

Congressional.

WASHINGTON, April 14.—An unexpected tariff vote was precipitated in the Senate to-day by Senator Morrill's motion to refer to the Finance Committee the Vest resolution declaring the order of Secretary Gage as to the retroactive clause of the tariff illegal. A yea and nay vote was taken, and Morrill's motion to refer prevailed. Yea 24, nays 23.

Senator Morgan to-day in the Senate asked to have a time set for a final vote on his resolution. Morrill objected and Morgan gave notice that he would call up the resolution daily until a vote was secured. During the consideration of the Indian Appropriation bill, which was taken up in the afternoon, Gorman criticised the manner of passing the appropriation bills without properly organized committees, and declared that it was in opposition to the caution of President McKinley in his inaugural address that strict economy should be used.

Representative Shannon of New York to-day introduced in the House a bill to amend the anti-trust law so that it will not prevent railroad traffic agreements. The Shannon bill is much less complete than Senator Foraker's.

The House was in session ten minutes to-day and then adjourned until Saturday without transacting any business. The session was long enough, however, to furnish the occasion for a display of a division among Democratic members which the recent caucus had not been able to heal. Dearmond of Missouri appeared as leader of the opposition to the leadership of Bailey. As soon as the journal had been read, Dingley made a motion that when the House adjourned it be until Saturday. Dearmond and Simpson immediately demanded a division. The vote on the motion stood 181 to 88. Bailey and his followers voted with the Republicans, while Dearmond and other Democrats and the Populists opposed the motion.

Presidential Nominations.

WASHINGTON, April 14.—The President to-day sent the following nominations to the Senate: State—James B. Angell of Michigan, to be Minister to Turkey; George N. West of the District of Columbia, Consul at Pictou, Nova Scotia. War—D. E. Mellickejohn of Nebraska, Assistant Secretary of War, Commissioners of the District of Columbia, John B. Wright and John D. Ross. Treasury—John D. Cunningham of Idaho, Assayer of the United States Assay Office at Boise City, Idaho.

In consequence the mill will be closed down for an indefinite period, thus throwing 700 or 800 hands out of employment.

The Hale and Norcross suits.

In the Hale & Norcross case in the Supreme Court, yesterday a question was raised as to whether the testimony of witnesses should be admitted in connection with the petition for a writ of mandamus sued for by Superintendent J. K. Ryan. The question was not settled. It was taken under advisement by the court, which will meet again on next Monday, but did not fix that date definitely for the rendition of a decision on that point.

If the court on Monday or later renders a decision in the affirmative, the suit for the writ of mandamus may be indefinitely prolonged. It is said that in this event a great many witnesses will be brought from San Francisco and much evidence introduced. If, to the contrary, the question is decided in the negative, it is said, the suit will be brought to a final issue on the petition for the writ, and should be settled very speedily.

Everybody who has the interest of the Comstock at heart deprecates the tangled state of Hale & Norcross affairs and wishes with all his soul that litigation over this mine would cease and that the troublesome element which has nearly disrupted the Comstock through the medium of sensational disturbances and agitations for its own selfish benefit would drop out of the mining world forever.

It is claimed that should the petition for a writ of mandamus be denied by the Nevada Court, the rights of the two sets of Hale & Norcross officials will have to be adjudicated in California in another and different legal proceeding. However that may be, the public hopes for one thing, the vigorous pressing of the matter to a final settlement and the resumption of the Hale & Norcross mining industry and stock business in an unfettered form.

No Deception in Nevada.

Attorney General Crowe of Missouri has set at rest the effort to construe the Stockbreeders' bill signed by Governor Stephens last week to cover boxing matches. This idea arose from an awkward line in the bill, which reads: "To legalize contests of strength and endurance between men and horses, etc." The Attorney General gave the Governor a written opinion that the bill was intended and could be construed solely to apply to horse racing, and that nowhere does it repeal any existing statute prohibiting sparring matches in the State. The Governor did not act until he had the Attorney General's opinion before him.

The bill was evidently intended to legalize glove contests, but the bobbie in the language no doubt killed the measure. As was expected by the promoters of the measure it had the support of the masses of the State, but Governor Stephens objected, so it leaves Nevada as the only State that comes out squarely and doesn't hide behind a limited round provision, while many of her sister States have contests innumerable, some of which are not only brutal but fatal.

Rev. Mr. Hunting Ordained.

The Rev. George C. Hunting, who has for some time past been the acting pastor of St. Paul's church of this city, was ordained at the church to-day. The ordination was a solemn and impressive rite, and it was witnessed by a large congregation of people composed of members of the church and others. Bishop Leonard and Rev. Samuel Unsworth of Reno, Rev. J. W. Eddie of Carson and Rev. T. L. Bellam of Wadsworth officiated in the performance of the ceremony. Bishop Leonard delivered an affecting sermon, and the choir sang appropriate musical selections. The crowd who attended the ordination found the occasion one of deep interest from a religious standpoint.—Chronicle.

He is naturally thankful. It is such results, of which these are samples, that prove the wonderful efficacy of this remedy for coughs and colds. Free trial bottles at Hodgkinson's Drug Store. The Trials of the Oar.

It is certain that the oar cannot possess his father's iron constitution, and certain, too, that he is and if the present system endures he must remain terribly overworked. It is not only that he must do work, sedentary work with papers, for eight or ten hours a day, like an English barrister or physician in great practice, but that the kind of work is so exhausting to the nerves. It is bad enough to be viceroys of India, with 200 or 300 executive orders to sign in a week, 10 per cent of which may "make" or nearly ruin individuals, but a viceroys is protected from doing too much harm by immutable laws, customs and responsibilities to the ultimate home authority. The "supreme order" of the oar, as it is called, has the force of law, cannot in numerous cases be dispensed with, and in others almost as numerous affects great interests, great political movements or the fate of persons to whom enormous powers are necessarily intrusted.

Every such order requires an effort of the mind. People talk of autocrats as if they were necessarily demons, but in reality they are men of business, harsh or gentle as temperament may incline, but still most anxious that their policy or administration or special favor should succeed, and increase either the dignity or the happiness of the empire they are set to rule. It is almost impossible for a man in weak health to fill such a post without occasionally breaking down, and as every breakdown is for many purposes an interregnum reports as to the oar's health are studied and inventoried, as in England are reports that the majority is revolting. Some of them may be true or all of them may be false, but none of them can be trusted unless confirmed by official or professional admissions.—London Spectator.

A Brand From the Burning.

After the German invasion an officer of the Turkish coast not settle down into civil life, but went off to Africa on an exploring expedition. In one of the native villages on the Niger he saw an intelligent, bright looking lad tied up, and on inquiry found that he was being fattened for a feast which was in contemplation in which he was to appear roasted. He bought the lad for a case of Old Tom gin and brought him back to Paris, where he was sent to school, astonishing everybody by his capacity. He has just died in that city, closing a history in which his rescue shines as the most memorable incident.

Electric Bitters is an excellent appetizer and aids digestion. Old people find it just exactly what they need. Price 50c. per bottle at Hodgkinson's Drug Store.

A Practical Man on Trib.

No veterinarian on the Pacific Coast has had a longer experience, nor has any man had a more successful practice with horses than Dr. Burns of Virginia, Nev.

He makes the following statement:

VIRGINIA CITY, Jan. 27, '97.

A valuable mare driven by Superintendent Lyman of the Con. Virginia mine on the Comstock Lode, had been in the stable unable to work, from the kick of another animal, received on the inside of the right foreleg above the knee. The skin had been broken and the muscles and tendons severely bruised. During a week's time I had given the limb such treatment, as from thirty years' professional experience I thought beneficial, but without avail. The leg was swollen to nearly twice its natural size, and the swelling would not yield to treatment. On Thursday evening, June 18, 1896, I made the first application of the liniment, Trib, thoroughly rubbing in half a six ounce bottle over the whole leg. I applied it regularly twice a day for the next three days. On the fourth day the mare went to work completely cured—the most surprising and satisfactory cure coming under my observation during a lifetime devoted to the treatment of horses.

During the past eight months, I have used your liniment regularly in my practice. Trib fulfills all its promises. An especially valuable feature of Trib is that while it has all the penetrating strength of the most powerful liniments it does not blister.

For love of the horse and the fellowship of horsemen, I offer this testimony. I know that Trib will benefit both.

Diphtheria Cure.

The testimony of a prominent physician:

FOUNTAIN CITY, Ind., June 17, 1895.

This certifies that I have been using V. O. in my practice. I have never found any medical preparation in 46 years of practice that is calculated to do so much good in so wide a range of diseases and leave no after bad effects. In Diphtheria it has proved a perfect specific in my hands, and I had rather depend on it alone in that dreadful disease than the whole popular Materia Medica with that left out.
